

ABSTRACT OF THE DISCLOSURE

A transmission-reflection type liquid crystal display device which may be driven as a transmission type or reflection type display by user selection, according to an external environment. Each pixel contains a reflector to reflect ambient light when the display is used as a reflection-type display. Each pixel also contains a light transmitting region to allow light to pass by the reflector when the display is used as a transmission-type display.